Kiwanis Club To Sponsor Loyalty Banquet Here Soon

Meeting of Committees Is Held and Plans for Event Made.

TO INVITE FARMERS

"Key Farmers" From Many Sections of County To Be Guests.

At a meeting of committees held at City Hall last Friday afternoon, plans were perfected for a loyalty banquet, sponsored by the local Kiwanis club, to be held Tuesday night next, October 22, to be attended by representatives of various industries in the city and "key" farmers from many sections of the county.

This will be the third of these banquets held in recent months, the first having been sponsored by the R. & P. W. club, and the second by the Rotary club, and from the gatherings have come many of the suggestions now being put into effect here for the betterment of this section of the state.

Plans for the banquet include attendance of at least one representative farmer from each section of the county as the guest of a Hope business or professional man and an effort made to co-ordinate the general spirit of progress now prevalent here into a smoothly-functioning organization.

John P. Cox, president of Kiwanis club, presided at the meeting yesterday afternoon. Joe Floyd was named chairman of the program committee for the banquet assisted by members of the various civic organizations in the city.

Gas Line Break Hits New Orleans

Industrial Plants Using Gas Are Down for the Day.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19.—(AP)—A break early today in the natural gas main line piping fuel to New Orleans from the up-state fields caused virtual suspension of all industrial plants depending on gas here. The break occurred at Litchfield, La., where workmen were doing repair work.

A moderate supply was furnished domestic consumers from the reserve in the tanks. Public service officials hoped to restore the line by noon.

Thaw's Secretary Defends Employer

Saw No Evidence That Defendant Applied Hair Brush to Art Model.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A gay breakfast party on New Year's Day, in 1927, in Harry K. Thaw's New York apartment at which Marcia Estardus, who is suing Thaw for $100,000, appeared nonchalantly clad in pajamas, was described on the witness stand today by Edmund Werner, Thaw's former secretary.

Thaw was present, Werner said, as were Mrs. Olga Getzler, sometimes known as the "Countess Olga" and E. Morgan Pendleton, also employed as Thaw's secretary. Drinks were served, he admitted, but he saw no evidence that Thaw had either bitten the lady in pajamas or beaten her with a hair brush, as charged.

Miss Estardus' testimony fixed the time of the attack at 8 a. m. and breakfast with champagne is said to have been served several hours earlier.

Werner contradicted Miss Estardus' statement that she met Morgan Pendleton casually at a Greenwich Village party on New Year's Eve at the home of Mrs. Lee Alexander.

He testified that the art model had telephoned Thaw's rooms at the hotel Belmont and had invited Thaw and Pendleton to join her at the party. Thaw pleaded a previous engagement, but Pendleton and the witness accepted. It was from this party that the girl left Pendleton and went to the Thaw apartment, later joining Thaw and other guests for a friendly afternoon and evening.

She says that shortly after her arrival Thaw attacked her with a hair brush and tore her scarlet evening dress from her body and that she left for her home in the Bronx early in the afternoon.

Contraband in Biggest Rum Raid

Spoils of the raid here are shown being inspected by prohibition agents who were part of the army that swooped down upon the haunts of the nation's largest bootlegging syndicate operating on the Long Island and New Jersey coasts. Some of the bombs, machine guns, small arms and liquor, as well as the powerful wireless sending and receiving sets confiscated in the raid upon the headquarters in Highland, N. J., are seen in this picture. One hundred and thirty dry agents, working along a 200-mile front, united in a series of 35 swiftly executed raids.

$6,000 Authorized for Highway Audit

Governor Issues Deficiency Proclamation to Carry On the Work.

LITTLE ROCK, October 19.—Governor Parnell yesterday issued a deficiency proclamation, authorizing the state comptroller's office to incur an indebtedness not to exceed $6,000 to carry on an audit of Highway Department records. When Act No. 167 was passed by the 1929 legislature, providing for a continuous audit of the Highway Department by three firms of accountants to be selected by the five constitutional state officers, State Comptroller Howard Reed asked Governor Parnell to veto a part of the maintenance appropriation for the comptroller's office.

Later it developed that certified public accountants would enter a contract with the state to conduct an audit under the terms specified in Act No. 167. The state comptroller continued the routine audit of highway records, but the work could not be carried on without authorizing the expenditure of a sum equivalent to the items vetoed in the comptroller's appropriation bill, Mr. Reed said.

Two accountants have been working on the highway audit for the past 18 months and will complete a check of the first three years of the Martineau program within a few weeks after the third year expires, March 1, 1930, it was said. The proclamation provided that the authorized deficiency should be used to "audit the Highway Department as in the past and in the same method and manner that all other state departments and agencies are audited."

Birmingham Bank Head Given Prison Sentence

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 19.—J. V. Laster, former bank president, was found guilty by a jury in criminal court today on a charge of having accepted a deposit in the Avondale Bank & Savings Company, knowing the institution to be insolvent. Judge Hefflin imposed sentence of not less than four nor more than five years.

Three Admit Guilt in Burning School

Held in Little Rock for Burning Lonsdale School.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 19.—(AP)—A confession to having participated in the burning of the new Lonsdale consolidated school in Saline county last August was said by authorities today to have been obtained from Tom Green, 45, one of three men held in custody in connection with the fire. The others are Jim Johnson, 30, and Rufus Englishby, 60. Johnson has also admitted that he took part in the burning. Green's confession was obtained after a lengthy grueling by John L. Carter, assistant state fire marshal.

Columbia County Man Would Halt Spending Money

Says Four Acts of Last Legislature Void and Injunction Sought.

FOUR ACTS INVALID

Suit Regarded As Direct Thrust At Assembly's Extravagance.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 19.—Attacking the legality of three acts passed during the 1929 session of the Arkansas legislature regarding the disposal of funds derived from the state severance tax, and seeking to restrain state officials from carrying out provisions of a fourth act which authorizes the use of certain monies accruing from the state income tax toward reducing the property tax, Dr. Oliver W. Collins, a taxpayer of Columbia county, today filed suit in Pulaski county chancery court against J. Oscar Humphries, state auditor, and Ralph Koonce, state treasurer, asking that they be enjoined from paying warrants under provisions of the four acts.

The suit alleges that Section 11 of Act 180, passed by the last legislature, in violation of the constitution of Arkansas, authorizes the diversion of a part of the income tax from the use for which it was originally intended; that the state treasurer has already transferred $400,000 of such funds; and that the legislature attempted to appropriate $494,000 of the severance tax fund for the biennial period ending June 30, 1931, for other purposes than those for which the tax was levied; and that the treasurer has issued warrants for such funds and the treasurer has cashed them.

It is contended by the plaintiff who is represented by Triebner and Lasley, Little Rock attorneys, that since the constitution forbids the use of tax monies for purposes other than those for which the tax was levied the legislature was not within its rights in authorizing transfer of such funds.

According to the suit, Section 11 of act 180 passed after the state income measure had become a law, attempts to set aside certain amounts each year from the first $500,000 collected through the income tax, whereas the bill specifically states that the first $500,000 each year should be used toward the building of a state hospital for nervous diseases and enlarging the tuberculosis sanatorium. Money thus diverted, the suit declares, would be taken from the hospital fund and used "for the reduction of the state property tax in violation of the state constitution."

The three acts concerning the state severance law are attacked on grounds that they are unconstitutional for the same reason as that regarding the income tax—in that they attempt to divert tax funds from the use for which they were levied. The three acts, the suit points out, authorize the use of $294,000 of severance tax money over a period of two years as follows: $116,000 for the School for the Blind; $828,000 for the School for the Deaf; and $150,000 for the State Board of Education. "Unless restrained by this court," the suit goes on, "the said defendants will continue to draw said warrants, against said appropriations and pay and charge the same against the funds derived from said severance tax until said appropriations and each of them are wholly exhausted."

A well known attorney interested in the case said today regarding the severance tax question brought up in the suit:

"The common school funds have heretofore been considered sacred. The constitution so carefully guards it and so distinctly forbids that it expressly forbids a single dollar being used for any purpose other than the common schools of the state. The constitution also forbids the legislature by any sham or subterfuge to appropriate monies dedicated by the law levying the tax to any other purpose whatsoever."

The suit is seen here as a direct thrust at the alleged spendthrift tendencies of the recent session of the General Assembly.

Hempstead County Boys Rank High In Contests At National Dairy Show

Nolan Leavallen and Winston Cobb, Hempstead county 4-H club boys who won state honors at Farmers' Week at Fayetteville, are back from St. Louis where they went to participate in dairy judging contests at the National Dairy Show.

Out of a total of 25 teams entered, representing every dairy community in the country, the Hempstead county youths placed seventh, a record really remarkable for the length of time they have been engaged in work of this kind, according to dairy show officials.

The youngsters were accompanied on their trip by County Agent Lynn Smith and Hamp Huskey, but these gentlemen will not return until next week, staying over to look after purchasing some of the purebred bulls to be placed in the several communities of the county.

Texas National Guard Is Loser

Fire Destroys Camp Mabry, National Guard Camp.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Camp Mabry, Texas National Guard encampment, was swept by fire today. The fire started at about two o'clock this morning. Its origin was not known. It swept rapidly through two buildings and destroyed a third.

The buildings were used as storehouses for National Guard supplies. No estimate of the loss was immediately available but fire officials said it would probably run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Civil Officers Named At Borger

Troops To Leave When Last Appointee Given Approval.

BORGER, Tex., Oct. 19.—(AP)—The new broom had swept clean here today and all the county and city officers suspended when Gov. Dan Moody sent troops here to apply martial law after the assassination of District Attorney John A. Holmes, had resigned.

The last of the county officers under the old civil regime, Constable C. M. Cummings, quit his office late last night. Cummings was not suspended by Governor Moody's proclamation of martial law but was disarmed by state rangers when it became effective.

In sending the troops here the governor charged that a deeply entrenched criminal ring existed and later his representatives announced that martial law would not be lifted until the county and city administrations were in the hands of men approved by Clem Calhoun, new district attorney.

With all of the old officers out, and most of them replaced by men approved by Calhoun, the troops were expected to return to their homes tomorrow or Saturday.

C. O. Moore, a Texas ranger, was made sheriff of the county yesterday by the county commissioners court and Albert Mace, police chief at Mexia, Texas, was made chief of police here. Mace took over his job at Mexia in 1922 when the troops left there after quelling a lawless situation similar to the one which existed here.

Preparations for the departure of the troops were expected the moment the county commissioners rounded out their appointments. Two constables remain to be appointed here, as well as a justice of the peace. In addition to these a complete set of assistants to the new sheriff must be approved.

Defends Husband At Strike Trial

Heretofore views of pretty 20-year-old Mrs. Edith Miller of New York, who told the court she did not believe in "a supreme being who rewards virtue and punishes wrong," caused her testimony to be impeached at the Charlotte, N. C., textile strike murder trial. She is pictured above as she took the stand to testify in defense of her husband, Clarence Miller, one of seven textile strikers accused of killing Police Chief A. F. Aderholt, of Gastonia.

'Biff' Jones Quits West Point Squad

To Be Transferred To Field Artillery Unit At Fort Sill.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Appointment of Major Ralph Sasse as head coach of football at the United States Military Academy to succeed "Biff" Jones at the end of the present season was announced today by West Point officials.

It was explained that Captain Jones was forced to relinquish his duties as coach of the army eleven on account of a regulation which prevents an officer remaining at West Point more than four years. Jones is in his fourth year as head coach.

He has been transferred to the field artillery school at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and will report for duty next September.

Father and Son Fined In Court

Parker's Trial Concluded—Saenger Case Comes Up Monday.

Total fines of $150 were assessed against Horace and Alvin Parker, father and son, at the conclusion of their trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill, in circuit court at Washington late Friday.

This trial closed the week's cases, and Judge W. H. Arnold adjourned court until 8 o'clock Monday morning, when the case of the Public-Saenger theater at Hope, charged with violating the Sunday closing law, will be heard.

Feeling Is Tense In Poisoning Case

Tennessee Sheriff Says Has Secured Valuable Clues.

ALAMO, Tenn., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Sheriff Emmons, of Crockett county, today released three negroes he had arrested in connection with the poisoning of a well which caused one death and the illness of ten members of two families using water from the well.

The officers said he had acquired valuable information from the negroes but refused to give their names on account of the intense feeling prevailing. Martin Wolf, 10, died from poisoning last week. His seven-year-old sister, Bessie, is sinking slowly in a Memphis hospital. His father is paralyzed and his mother and a brother, aged three, are in a hospital.

Navy Department Refuses To Bring Records To Court

Illinois Gangster Is Held On Coast

Identified As Member of Birger Gang In Bloody Herring.

GULFPORT, Miss., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Sheriff J. S. Pritchard, of Franklin county, Ill., today positively identified a man arrested here yesterday as Connie Ritter, member of the Birger-Newman gang in southern Illinois, wanted on five charges.

The officer reached here this morning and without any hesitation identified the man posing as Fred Randall along the coast as Conrad Ritter, hunted for three years for participation in crimes in Williamson and Jackson counties, Illinois, for which a gang leader has been hung and other members are in prison.

The sheriff said the charges against Ritter were in connection with three murders and two highway robberies.

Divines Asked To Eschew Politics

Methodist Ministers Under Rule Would Not Preach Politics.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 19.—A resolution to restrict political activities of Methodist ministers was introduced today to the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, at the 147th annual session of the conference here. It probably will be acted on Monday, and if adopted will be forwarded to the General Conference.

The resolution offered by Fred C. Abbott, a lay delegate from Norfolk, recites that there is an increasing tendency for preachers to take an active part in partisan politics and these practices "tend to engender strife, promote disorder and dissension and often to the disruption of the church."

The resolution would provide that the Virginia Conference go on record "that it vigorously disapproves and protests against such practices and earnestly admonishes its members hereafter to refrain from taking part in public political controversies and contests. It also asks that the conference declare officially the future policy of the church in regard to the subject."

It is pointed out in the resolution that the traditional policy of the church since its organization has been to instruct its minister to eschew and abstain from political interest and activities.

Dangers In the Home

THE fact that accidents that took place in the home during the past year caused no fewer than 28,000 fatalities in the United States indicates that our various safety organizations have a new problem almost as pressing as the ever increasing traffic riddle to solve.

At the recent meeting of the 18th annual Safety Congress in Chicago, figures were submitted by E. S. Fallow, actuary of the Travelers Insurance Co., analyzing the various causes of home accidents. After setting up a table showing how 28,000 people happened to meet accidental deaths while in their own homes, Mr. Fallow pointed out a number of simple rules which each householder should observe. These include:

Get rid of any animal that bites. Be careful in lighting cigars or cigarettes. Do not leave objects in such a position that they may fall and injure someone. Beware of sharp instruments, and do not leave broken glass lying around.

Be careful while working on roofs of houses, garages and sheds; also while working on chairs, tables, benches and ladders.

Falls in bath-tubs are numerous; perhaps a handle might be devised in connection with all bathtubs, so that one might take hold of it while getting in or out.

Beware of waxed floors and rugs which are not attached, by all means watch out while going up and down stairs. Watch out for poisoned shrubs or plants while working in the garden.

This rather bewildering list of precautionary measures only covers the major sources of accidental deaths, according to Mr. Fallow. It is worth keeping these rules in mind. To learn that there are so many ways in which one may come to grief while "safe" in one's home is acutely disturbing.

Advertising Rings the Bell

WRITING a letter to the local agency for DuPont paints, Mr. E. F. Baldwin, in charge of sales promotion for the E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Company, tells this one:

"The publisher of a small town newspaper was trying to get the general store owner to advertise. 'Say, I've been in this town 30 years,' he said, 'and every man woman and child knows where I am and what I sell. I don't need to advertise.' 'Is that so?' asked the publisher. 'Tell me, how long has the Methodist church been here?' 'Fifty years, I guess. Why?' 'Well, don't they still ring the bell every Sunday morning?'"

Commenting on this bit of philosophy, Mr. Baldwin goes on to say a word about the importance of newspaper advertising to local merchants and dealers, from which we take this paragraph:

"Advertise your business, and advertise it as consistently as the ringing of a church bell. Some folks keep putting things off forever, unless constantly reminded; others forget. Keep your name before newspaper readers all the time and you will get your share of the business."—West Point (Miss.) Times Leader.

Sportsmanship

SURVEYING the recent world series, it occurs to us, that the American baseball fan has a better sense of sportsmanship than he is usually given credit for.

Young Elwood English, Cubs' shortstop, had a dismal time in the field. His errors lost the first game and helped to lose the second. His play at shortstop weakened the Chicago team tremendously.

But English was young and pardonably nervous. He brooded over his mistakes, and because he tried too hard to make up for them, he made more. But the fans, both in Chicago and Philadelphia, applauded him frequently when he came to bat.

The fans—sometimes called "the wolves" by the players—had enough consideration to sense that English was in a very trying situation. They had sympathy for him, despite the costliness of his errors. They could have been excused for "riding" him, but they didn't do it. They proved their sportsmanship by letting the youngster know that they were eager to forget his errors.

The Romance of Light

MONDAY, October 21, the world celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the electric light. On that day in 1879 Thomas A. Edison turned the current on in a lamp consisting of a carbonized cotton thread in a perfect vacuum as he could produce. The lamp burned forty hours—and Edison knew that at last he had discovered the secret of artificial light.

It is within the memory even of the young men who served in the recent war that homes were lighted with oil lamps, and electric lights were a luxury. This writer was 12 when a middle-class family first thought it could afford a home lighted with electricity. That was eighteen years ago. The scientific discovery which made it possible was only fifty years ago—next Monday.

America ought to cherish this anniversary. If we are proud in the vaunted strength of our political government, then we should be humble before the altar of this industrial god that has pumped the forge and hammered the anvil to change the very face of this continent. If government is mighty, surely electricity, which Edison captured and exploited, has given government something to be mighty over.

Without the electric light there would be none of the so-called luxury industries that we know today—no automobiles, no motion pictures, no radios. The lines of super-power that trace their way across the continent would never have been, and labor and capital, employed in thousands of cities, would be pitiful dwarfs of their present image. For it was the electric light that opened the door to the advancement of modern industry. All the rest came afterward, and because of it.

And Ernest Greenwood has written an interesting paragraph on the origin of the name of the Mazda lamp—taken from the Persian religion of Zoroaster, sometimes known as fire worship:

"According to this religion, which basically is not so very different from any other religion, the universe was visualized as a great battleground on which Good and Evil were forever struggling for mastery. On the one side was Ahura Mazda—whose name has been made immortal by the Mazda lamp—the Wise Spirit. His six vassals were: Good Thought, Right Law, Noble Government, Holy Character, Health and Immortality. On the other side was Angra Mainyu, the Lie Demon, Man stood between the two. On the one side was Good, Purity and Light, and on the other Evil, Filth and Darkness . . .

"In both Greece and Rome the fire cults of Hestia at Vesta and of Vulcan were a marked feature of religion. In ancient Rome the 'Regia' was the sacred center supposed to be the abode of Vesta. If by any chance, the sacred fire should be extinguished, all business, and in fact, all activities of every kind, stopped. It was thought that the connection between heaven and earth had been broken."

The symbol of the torch is immortal throughout the ages. But it remained for an American, Edison, to find its perfect expression in electricity—the most potent and mysterious force known to man. The genius of the inventor led him much further. He had developed the carbon transmitter (1876) which made the telephone possible; he spent the years 1872-75 inventing the duplex and quadruplex systems by which four messages are sent over the same telegraph wire at the same time. In 1888 he invented the phonograph, and three years later, 1891, the motion picture camera.

And through the portal of this marvelous human mind has marched the electric industry, to take an unrivaled position in the homes, factories and finance of the nation. An article by Everett W. Villett in the September bulletin of the National Electric Light association informs us:

"While population in the United States increases yearly at a rate of from 1-2 to 2 per cent and industrial growth is at a rate of from 3 to 4 per cent, the electric light and power industry has grown at the annual rate of 10 per cent for the last several years. This compares in the utility field with 6 per cent for the manufactured gas business, 2 per cent for water supply, 10 per cent for telephone, telegraph and cable connections, and a decline for electric railway companies.

"It is estimated that the present investment in the electric utility industry is over $10,000,000,000, being exceeded only by that in agriculture, steam railroads and the oil-producing and refining industry."

The romance of light has become a romance of business. America owes an hour of tribute, next Monday, to Mr. Edison, giver of this fine gift.—Alex. H. Washburn.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—If it had not been for the active efforts of a veteran American newspaperman, Prime Minister MacDonald probably would not have made his important visit to the United States. Apparently the idea never occurred to anyone else.

Mr. Edward Price Bell, who was for 25 years correspondent in London for the Chicago Daily News, sold the suggestion to MacDonald and was the first to advise President Hoover that MacDonald would like to come.

Bell is a man about 60 years old. Lord Northcliffe called him "the best journalist America ever sent to Europe." After studying and writing about international affairs for three decades, Bell came to the conclusion a year ago that Anglo-American relations were in an unusually bad way and that is was very much worth somebody's while to try to head off a possible war between the two countries which might in time develop if the situation were allowed to go from bad to worse.

Sounded Out Statesmen
He talked to Hoover about it and found that Hoover was thinking much the same thing. Later he was to find that most of the more prominent American and British statesmen agreed that the existing mutual misunderstanding and near distrust between the two countries was deplorable. Hoover thought it was largely up to the newspapers to change public opinion. Incidentally, former President

Coolidge once expressed an identical idea to your correspondent.

Hoover told Bell that he was especially anxious to see naval expenditures reduced in both countries, feeling that increased armaments were both an unjustifiable economic burden and a menace to world peace. Bell went to Canada and discussed the situation with MacKenzie King, who felt the same way. Then Bell sailed for London, talking a great deal en route with former Secretary of State Kellogg.

Bell was on a journalistic mission of good will.

"I thought that if the heads of the two governments didn't have brains enough and power enough to keep us out of war, something was very wrong," he told your correspondent. "Until we could establish the principle that no war could occur between us we were in greater or lesser peril."

He found an impression in England that Hoover was unfriendly to the British and set out to correct it. He recruited many of his old friends on the British press including the famous J. L. Garvin of the London Observer, to help in the effort to create a better understanding of American motives. Garvin credited Bell with sweeping away a general misconception and called him "the best unofficial ambassador the American people ever sent to our people." Other British newspapers heaped praises on him.

Bell first proposed the Washington trip to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, who said that he would "love to see the president and go over everything of interest to two peoples, laying all cards face up on the table." Baldwin re-

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH
W. P. HAMMON, Pastor.

Our Bible school is growing but there is yet room for more pupils. We have room for about fifty more without crowding the classes. What if we were to say when you come over to class some Sunday morning that we were sorry but there is no room for you and so you would have to turn around and go home. This will not be the case for a few Sunday's yet but it looks as if we are going to have to limit the number who can attend. However, if you will be one of those fifty, there is plenty room for you. Come.

Christian Endeavor meets at 6:45 with Claudia Coop as leader. Evening sermon at seven thirty will be "Dreaming Dreams." The morning sermon will be on "The Greatest Power in the Christian Religion."

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. Francis A. Buddin, Pastor

The observance of Church Loyalty Month is bringing gratifying results. Each Sunday marks a decided advance in the attainment of the three objectives, viz., every member in church; every pledge paid; and every member a soul-winner. The hour has struck; the challenge is to all. If you were not present at the church school and the other services last Sunday, don't fail to be, on hand tomorrow. Those who were present last Sunday will surely be there again. 9:45 is the hour. Departments and classes for all ages. With one hundred men in the men's class last Sunday, there ought to be one hundred and fifty tomorrow.

At 11 a. m. the sermon subject will be "Reasons For Soul-Winning." The Epworth League will meet at 6:45, and at 7:30 Rev. J. A. Henderson will preach, and following the sermon the fourth and last quarterly conference for the year will be held. All members of the conference are urged to be present. Mid-week service Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Everybody is invited to all services. Come with us, and do us good.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

W. R. Anderson, D. D., Minister
9:45 a. m. Our Sunday school meets in departments for the lesson study. We had an increase in attendance last Sunday, if you will come tomorrow it will help. We want all the congregation in the Sunday School.

11 a. m. Morning worship and sermon. Subject, "Jesus and the Church." There will be special music by the choir.
7:30 p. m. Evening worship and sermon. Subject, "Heaven, Its Inhabitants, Their Character and Employment." Special music.

Given under my hand this 19th day of October, A. D. 1929.
WILLIE HARRIS
Commissioner in Chancery
Oct. 19-26.

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

Autumn lurches down the year, like a crane who's lost her way. How the dear old peer peer from their curtained homes today. Naughtily white chrysanthemums follow in their reistering train. Laughing at her strange disaster. Flaming sunne and pink aster. Scoff and nod amid the rain. Yet behold that ancient flame. Burning in her tingle eyes. Gold of dreams without a name. Something sweet she cannot tame. Resting upward to the skies. --Selected.

William Powell in "The Greene Murder Case" A Paramount Picture

The most resourceful and daring of all criminals are women, says S. S. Van Dine, famous author of murder mystery novels, in the June issue of the Cosmopolitan magazine.

Van Dine backs up his statement with a highly interesting story, based on the records of an actual crime. It is "The Greene Murder Case," which Paramount has made into an all-talking moving picture, with William Powell in the role of Philo Vance, suave society-detective.

"For calculating, cold-blooded murder, women more than hold their own with men," says the author. "It is a paradox that their most ruthless, cerebral crimes are generally the result of some powerful emotional impetus."

"The Greene Murder Case" will show at the Saenger theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

He Had Bad Luck But Couldn't Sway the Court

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Oct. 19.—Before pronouncing sentence on Desiderio Madrid who had pleaded guilty to a liquor charge, Judge Helmick asked the defendant if he had anything to say.

"Madrid replied: "Nothing except my bad luck."

"What is your bad luck?" the court asked.

"That they found me," Madrid replied.

Madrid was fined $100 and sentenced to thirty days in jail.

By W. M. BRAUCHER

ABOUT this time of year you always used to be able to work up a fairly good fist fight or chair-throwing contest in any barber shop in the land by bringing up for settlement that classical old argument about who plays the best brand of football, the east or the west.

In these impromptu imbroglios there was always a "fella" from Hawaii, a gent from Illinois, somebody from California and a very good chair thrower indeed from Notre Dame. But this year you would have to make reservations at that quarrel for one more customer or maybe three—and they would be from Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

And the people who write the headlines for the sports pages nowadays, in addition to being well versed in Yale Bulldogs, Princeton Tigers, Army Mules and Minnesota Gophers, have to reckon with—among others—Florida Alligators, North Carolina Tar Heels, Duke Blue Devils, Alabama Crimson Tides and Georgia Tech Golden Tornadoes.

Football has gone south. You have the proof in All-America selections, in the number of vast new stadia being built and dedicated below the Mason and Dixon line and in the important intersectional games the teams of the south are playing.

It remains to be written whether or not the south plays a kind of football superior to that of the east or west—but last year Georgia Tech beat California 8 to 7 in the Tournament of Roses game, duplicating Alabama's defeat of Washington in the same game in 1926. And it was Georgia Tech that opened her season by trimming Rockne's tough Notre Dame eleven last year.

The member from the south can point to an intersectional schedule that indicates the south fears not any man's football team. Outstanding are the games between Virginia and Princeton, Florida and Harvard, Pittsburgh and Duke, Georgia and Yale, Georgia Tech and Notre Dame, Vanderbilt and Minnesota, Mississippi and Purdue, Florida and Oregon State and Georgia and New York University.

EIGHTEEN years ago, at old Ponce de Leon Park, Georgia met Georgia Tech and 7000 people saw the battle. Four years later, just before the war, not many more than that saw the same game at Grant Field—the crowd was comfortably packed in stands that ran along one side of the field.

This year, one team, Georgia Tech, to judge by the crowds that saw opening games, will play a season before 200,000 people. That gives you a fair idea of what a tremendous growth football has had in the south.

Before the war not a college in the south was prepared to seat more than 10,000 or 12,000 fans and there were not more than three or four that could handle crowds of that size. Today eight or ten can seat crowds of 30,000, while several others can handle crowds of 20,000 and more.

Of the 23 institutions in the Southern Conference, 12 already have constructed fine football plants or have granted building contracts for great new structures.

The University of Georgia played Yale Oct. 12 in a new stadium that seats 35,000. Florida has made steps toward building a $500,000 plant and Alabama has authorized one to seat 12,000 when the first unit is completed.

Georgia Tech has had more than 42,000 paid admissions at Grant Field in Atlanta. Down at New Orleans Tulane Stadium has a normal seating capacity of 28,000. Virginia's stadium seats 15,000.

This year Duke University is enjoying its first year in the Southern Conference and celebrating the occasion by dedicating a stadium to seat 33,000. It is built to take care of future growth in attendance, allowances for additions to seat that many more being included in the plans.

He's pretty sure of an All-American berth.

Tennessee's Eugene McEver.
He's one

Alabama's Bernard Holm. . .

Vanderbilt Coach Dan McGugin. . . . No one is more pessimistic than he until the last game of the season has been played.

Georgia Tech's Stumpy
Thomason. . . . Dixie thinks that Coach Alexander has developed

DUKES idea of letting fans know what is going on during a game seems to be an advance over the referee's system of signals, which must be memorized before they are of much value. If baseball has a scoreboard like that, why not football? Yet most of the schools in the east and west let the fans try to figure out what it's all about.

Important roles in the upbuilding of southern football have been played by coaches from the east and west. Florida not only has an all-star team, but an all-star coaching staff. The head coach is Charlie Bachman, former Notre Dame star, who is a wonderful leader of men and has a keen football brain. Major Van Fleet, Florida head coach several years ago, is assisting him and has charge of the line. Van Fleet was a West Point star years ago.

Nash Higgins, famous track coach, has special charge of the "omelet" squad, the check absorbers for the regulars. Nash also does a little scouting for Florida. Joe Holsinger, Kansas Aggie star of a few years ago, has charge of the backfield, and Brady Cowell, from the same school, has the freshmen. Jim Pimbo is trainer. One of the south's greatest coaches is Bill Alexander, strong and silent, who makes iron men of the lads at Georgia Tech. Alexander is a graduate of Tech and as a football player never shocked the world. He did manage to win a letter after scrubbing manfully for several seasons. It is in the teams that he puts on the field that Bill's fame rests.

Alexander sent one great player to that mythical haven of the famous, the All-America team, last year in the person of the mighty Peter Pund, center. The experts had to think hard to put

Florida Mentor Charlie Bachman. . . . While starring for Notre Dame he picked up a lot of Rockne's football tricks.

Halfback Warner Mizell on the second team, and this year without a doubt Mizell will be widely chosen for the country's best mythical eleven.

Writers who saw Stumpy Thomason in conference games and in the Rose game last winter declare that if Stumpy doesn't win All-America mention this year it will be because he breaks a leg. And it isn't Bill Alexander's fault that the great fullback Father Lumpkin is playing professional football this year—the Father just couldn't wrap his bean around those logarithms.

AT FLORIDA, the Notre Dame-schooled Charlie Bachman has 50 young men on a football squad that not only have won the interest of the south, but other parts of the country as well. The Gainesville gang practiced out on the beach and worked up so much sand that last year they led the rest of the country in scoring points, with 336 counts in nine intercollegiate contests. And Vassar was not on Bachman's list either.

This year, with intersectional bouts against Harvard and Oregon on his list, Coach Bachman has a team of 19 letter-men from 1928, including Dale Vansickle at end, the choice of scores of writers for All-America last year. At guard is Jimmy Steele, whom Joe Bedenk, last year's line coach, declared to be as powerful, as smart and as able a linesman as he had ever seen on a college gridiron. Steele was picked by many for the second All-America team this fall.

Florida will take a lot of consideration from the experts this year, too, in the backfield where roams the person of Mr. Cannonball Crabtree. Clyde was virtually unanimous choice for All-Southern last year and won a place on many of the All-America pickers' third teams, though the experts in the south say he deserved a better fate. Paired with the Cannonball is "Red" Bethea, as shifty a back as ever wiggled out of a tackler's hands.

Two coaches from far north are guiding the destinies of teams in the Southern Conference. Dan McGugin of Michigan does the weeping for Vanderbilt, mostly before the games. The Vandies were supposed to have a weak team this year, but then so was Illinois. You never can tell from what McGugin says before a game how big a score those Commodores are going to run up. "Bull" Brown, selected by several as All-American guard, is the skipper.

The other is Bernie Bierman from Minnesota, teaching Tulane's Green Wave how to wash up the opposition. Surprises were expected from Tulane this year, with the great Blond Flash, Billy Bunker, as captain and ace. But then, as Bill Alexander says, "all these Southern Conference teams are getting to be surprises, and you never know just what

Georgia Tech's Head Coach
Bill Alexander. . . . Like another Alexander he's ready for new sections to conquer.

you're going to run into." Bunker was the second highest scorer in the nation last year.

DOWN at Tennessee, two of the greatest running backs in the Southern or any other man's conference, Hackman and McEver, are not only playing again this year, but they're only juniors!

Last year Tennessee went through the season undefeated, beating Alabama, Florida, Vanderbilt and Ole Miss. The team is right back this year, with a tough schedule.

Washington and Lee, like Florida, North Carolina and Georgia, introduced the "Notre Dame system" this year, with Gene Oberst in the coaching role.

"You've got to know the Notre Dame system to play in this league any more," was the way one of the southern coaches expressed recently in reaction to the increasing number of Notre Dame grads now coaching in the south.

"There's Chuck Collins at North Carolina, Charlie Bachman at Florida and Harry Mehre at Georgia—all Rockne guys, and they're as tough to beat as old Knute himself."

Earl Abel of Colgate, coaching at Virginia, is among the eastern coaches working in the conference this year. Outstanding among these easterners, of course, is Wallace Wade of Brown.

Most of the coaches are from the east and north, but the rivalry is local and intense. It is this rivalry and a mounting spirit that is making it harder and harder for the experts to pick All-America teams without cruising around in Dixie.

Horatio High Wins One-Sided Game From Bobcats, 20-0

Twelve Completed Passes Not Sufficient for Cat Counter

Taylor, Coulter, Harrell and Reeves Star for Locals While Horatio Captain Runs Wild With the Ball.

Another loss was checked up to Horatio in their fourth try of the season to win a game, going down to defeat 20-0 and thus maintaining a nearly perfect record. One draw and three losses shows the Cats standing in the percentage column.

Taylor, Coulter, Harrell and Reeves were outstanding members of the Hope squad in the scrimmage, while Fuller, Horatio captain, was almost a one-man eleven by himself. Wray, for Hope, in three attempts to carry the ball, lost 45 yards. The overhead attack of the Cats was one of the features of an otherwise listless game, they completed 12 passes out of 16 tries but they couldn't score.

Horatio scored in the first five minutes of play, receiving the kick off and marching 70 yards on six first downs to cross the goal. In the second quarter Hope advanced to Horatio's 5-yard line but was held for downs.

Horatio kicked to Hope to open the first half, and the visitors punted back to midfield on the first play. Horatio took the ball and Fuller circled left end for 60 yards and he scored touchdown. In the fourth quarter with the ball on Horatio's 40-yard line, Fuller, Winchell and E. Glasgow hit and rounded the line to cover the remaining distance to the goal line. E. Glasgow kicked two points after touchdown.

A passing combination, Taylor to Harrell, was the best offensive Hope could muster, and was successful as far as it went. Bowden, Horatio guard, broke the line repeatedly however to snare Hope plays. Coulter, Harrell and Wray were the stars of the Hope, defense.

Horatio made 14 first downs to

Golf Cheer Leaders

According to ancient custom, the people who watched golfers go about their deadly business in tournaments were supposed to maintain a discreet silence. You could go to a major tournament wearing a red necktie, tan buttoned shoes, a wing collar and a round haircut and still escape undying fame as long as you did not cheer the players.

It has long been a privilege of the ring fan to hiss or boo the bums as they go through the motions of a prize fight. At a ball game you always could arise at a given moment and, in a loud voice, denounce as spurious any of the ivory that happened to be on exhibition, including the masked guessers.

But if you were caught talking out loud at a golf match, you were placed in somewhat the same peculiar position as a tired business man having a friend from the Folies out to lunch at a quiet little cafe filled with his wife's relatives. A Yell Here and There

Now, however, along with sacrifice hits and double steals, the business of dumbness at a golf tournament seems to be passing out of style. During several of the big matches during the year, the comment of the galleries reached almost the enthusiastic proportions of college yells. The strange part of it all is that golfers (or many of them) seem to be able to play with the talkie accompaniment equally as well as in the old silent days.

Hope's six, and each side was penalized 25 yards during the game.

A specific example was given in the amateur championship at Pebble Beach. The gallery took it upon itself to uphold Jimmy Johnston in the final joust and went to no pains to conceal its disapproval of the tactics of the doughty Dr. Willing.

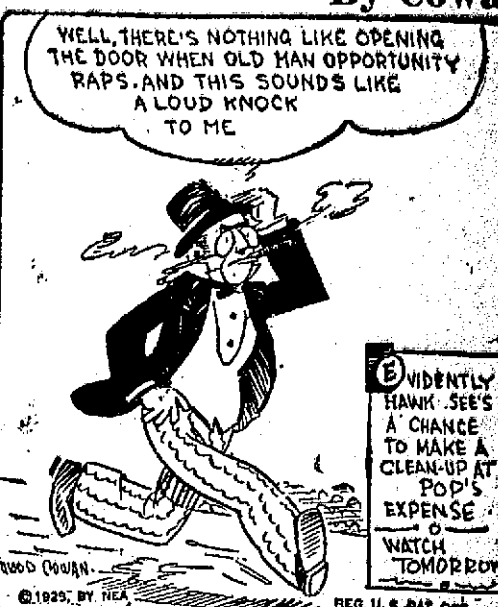

Dr. Willing went through that tournament with the idea that a putt is a putt, be it ever so puny, and that you have to sink a six-inch putt before the ball is in the cup. Dr. Willing is one of those careful, conscientious golfers who will give you any putt that you can make, after you make it.

Then, too, when Cyril Tolley was in trouble, and Dr. Willing went over to scrutinize his opponent's lie, the gallery was so voluble that you couldn't even hear the roar of the surf nearby. The gallery decided of itself that these tactics were not proper and expressed its decision by cheers for Dr. Willing's opponent whenever he made a good shot.

RED CROSS PROVIDES PLAY AND COMFORTS FOR VETERANS

President and Mrs. Hoover Receive Disabled at White House Garden Party.

RECREATION in the form of picnics, visits to the theater and to the motion picture shows, dances and card parties, arranged by American Red Cross workers for the disabled veterans and sick service men in the Government hospitals throughout the country are universally commended by the authorities as of great value in aiding the men to recovery.

Only those men who are in the hospitals in Washington, the nation's capital, however, are able to attend quite the latest party of the year—that which the President and the First Lady of the Land are in habit of giving annually for disabled and ill veterans. The first of the White House garden parties for the veterans was given by President Harding, and it has since been an annual institution, lapsing only once or twice due to the illness of the First Lady.

President and Mrs. Hoover this year gave a party, with Red Cross workers and Grey Ladies, who are constant visitors to the men in the wards, accompanying them.

The Red Cross has workers in forty-eight Veterans' Bureau hospitals, and in all regular Army and Navy Hospitals, at all camps and posts, and last year these workers arranged 20,352 recreation events, Picnics in proper season, visits to theaters, with a supper served cañon style by the Red Cross Chapter afterwards, and similar events were arranged for men able to leave the wards. For the mental cases, shows, dances and card parties are given at the hospital centers.

Red Cross work for disabled veterans last year also included handling a monthly average of 12,104 cases by the national staff and branch offices. Red Cross Chapters to the number of 2,821 throughout the nation carried on service work

Frank Slavin, A Fighter In Those Bare-Knuckle Days, Loses Last Bout

VANCOVER, B. C., Oct. 19.—(AP)—One of the last links connecting present-day pugilism with the era of John L. Sullivan and other fighters of the bare-knuckle school has been broken with the death here of Frank Slavin.

Slavin fought as a professional for more than 20 years, fell under the gold spell of the Yukon during the gold stampede of 1898 and wound up the spectacular side of his career with an enlistment in the Canadian army during the World war when he was 64 years old. He died in a hospital here Thursday after an illness of more than a year.

Born in Maitland, New South Wales, January 5, 1862, Slavin took up boxing as a form of amusement while he was working in a mining camp in Australia. He won the amateur heavyweight championship and turned professional more or less by accident. In a Queensland barroom, he encountered Martin Powers, a local champion, who poked fun at the amateur until Slavin offered to fight him then and there. So great was the interest, however that the fight was staged at a race track for a purse. Slavin beat Powers in 13 minutes under prize ring rules.

Slavins rise was rapid. In 1896, Martin Cosello, of the United States, who had lasted five rounds with Sullivan, visited Australia, and Slavin was picked to uphold the prestige of that country against the invader. Cosello was knocked out in seven rounds. Slavin then went to Europe and still later to the United States, meeting among others, Jim Smith, Auliffe of Detroit; Peter Jackson, Jim Hall, Bob Armstrong, Jake Kilrain and Frank Craig.

Slavin was in San Francisco when news of the gold strike in the Klondike came. He immediately went to the Yukon where he remained for many years. While there, he met Frank Gotch, the heavyweight wrestling champion. Gotch thought he could box, and he agreed not to use wrestling tactics. After Slavin had given him a bad battering however, Gotch, infuriated, lifted the Australian in his arms and tossed him out of the ring.

Slavin's proudest boast was his happy married life.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Jack Dempsey remembered quite a few of Rickard's stunts and used them in his first show at Chicago. The ushers were attired in the military manner. Jack spoke a few well-chosen words into the mike about all the "nice people" at the bout. The only touch missing was Tex's "never seed nuthin' like it." Johnny Dundee has been fighting for 18 years and still is—but not very well lately. Hans Wagner hated to have his picture taken with a bat before a ball game. Once in Pittsburgh he smashed a camera after being "shot" picking out a mace. Sam Hildreth never would let a photographer take a picture of one of his horses before a race.

Donnie Bush spends the winters in a comfortable old-fashioned home in Indianapolis. With his 70-year-old mother.

The Innocent Cheat

©1929 BY
NEA SERVICE INC.

by Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL—POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Helen Page feels indebted to and in love with her guardian, Leonard Brent. The latter changes his plans for her future after meeting a dying beggar, Nellin, and tells the girl she is heiress of a millionaire named Cunningham. Brent takes her to the lonely old man and offers proofs which Cunningham accepts, as he had been searching for his dead daughter's child for years.

Among Helen's new friends are Eva Ennis and her brother Robert, who falls in love with her. Brent becomes jealous of Bob and plots to win Helen quickly, especially after finding another locket like the one he had taken from Nellin to prove Helen the heiress. Hearing that a sudden shock would kill Cunningham, Brent slyly administers the shock, and the servants find the old man dead in bed. Then, by clever acting and appeal to her loyalty Brent wins Helen's promise to marry him.

Later, she and Bob discover their true love for each other and he is angry when she tells him she cannot break her engagement even though she loves him. Bob flirts with Shalimar Morris, not knowing that Helen has tried to break with Brent after finding him indulging in a love affair with another woman. But he had refused to release her and had made dire threats if she tried to throw him over.

Eva realizes that Helen is unhappy, but resents her treatment of Bob which has driven him to Shalimar. But Eva is worried, too, for Brent is now avoiding her after having made ardent love to her secretly. She tells Bob and he laughs at her, saying that Helen is engaged to Brent. Eva collapses and admits that Brent has been making love to her secretly.

to her, Bob goes to tell Helen the kind of end she is engaged to, and while he is there an urgent call comes from his mother. They rush over just in time to prevent Eva from taking poison in a fit of hysteria.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXI

Helen went up the stairs on reluctant feet. She dreaded this talk with Eva, for there was nothing she could say to her that would carry hope to the unhappy girl.

Brent was a scoundrel—that was all there was to the matter. But Helen knew that love cannot be torn out of the heart by the roots. It must die a lingering death when it perishes.

She found Eva quiet, lying with a dampened towel on her forehead. The odor of witchhazel came faintly to Helen's nostrils as she leaned over the bed and took one of Eva's hands.

"Sit down—here," Eva said and moved to make room for Helen beside her.

"How do you feel?" Helen asked.

Eva closed her eyes and shook her head. "Poor mother," she whispered. Then, louder: "Oh, Helen, how awful it was for her! I didn't know what I was doing. In here with . . . with that stuff and mother pleading outside my door. I don't know how I could have done such a thing."

"Thank God you didn't really do it," Helen said.

Eva's eyes flashed open and Helen drew back from sight of the misery in their depths.

"But I want to die! I don't want to live!" Eva cried.

"None of us do, at times," Helen answered, speaking very gently; "but we don't quit when we think of those who will suffer for our act. You see, Eva darling, what it would mean to your mother—and Bob if you gave way to your despair."

"Yes, I know. I know," Eva moaned; "but what am I to do?"

"You don't think any man is worth the heartbreak of your entire family, do you?" Helen pressed.

"No, no, they're too good. They've always been too good to me."

"Then show them now that you appreciate their love. Try to forget Leonard Brent. He's no more worth your thought than a . . . than a viper, Eva."

Eva looked at her despairingly. "That has never mattered very much to women, has it?" she asked. "I love him, and I can't believe that he didn't care at all for me. Oh, I know I can't have him," she wailed abruptly; "but don't tell me that it's all because he is a liar and a cheat. There must be some other reason."

Helen's cheeks flushed uncomfortably as she answered that there might be another girl.

Eva's expression grew accusing though she did not mean it to be.

Smith Jr., Mary Haynes, John Wesley House, Joy Ramsey, Carolyn Clark, June Crosby, Helen Whitley, Vera Allen Kathleen Hunt.

Three B—Grace Raines, George Dodson Jr., Mable Keith.

"Was it you?" she asked, and that. What can you hope for then added quickly: "Bob thought now?"

Helen hesitated a long moment before answering. Eva's evidence of painful suspense brought the truth from her at last.

"Yes," she admitted. "I was engaged to him, Eva. But he did not love me. He can't love anyone. He isn't capable of it. He's the most selfish—"

"Then it was your money?" Eva interrupted.

Helen regarded her in complete surprise. Strangely, she thought, this had never occurred to her. Her money! Of course!

"I think so," she cried. "He would be just that vile."

"Perhaps," Eva said, "he needs a great deal of money, Helen."

She had found this explanation of his conduct less difficult to bear than the thought that he cared more for another girl than he did for her. And her complete obsession with her passion for Brent was driving her to his defense.

"Don't be a fool," Helen retorted a bit impatiently. "He has enough money. Only greed could make him want to marry for more—greed and a heart like a block of ice."

"You seem to hate him," Eva remarked, and the thought at the back of her mind was that Helen too must have suffered through Brent.

"Not on my own account," Helen hastened to assure her, sensing perhaps, what Eva was thinking. "But I shall always hate him for what he has done to you, Eva."

"Then you do not love him?" Eva's voice was filled with profound relief.

Helen said no in unmistakably negative accents. Eva grasped her hands and murmured an expression of thankfulness.

"Can't we talk about something else?" Helen urged. "Wouldn't you like to hear about Bob and me, Eva?"

She had not intended to bring her newly recovered happiness to Eva's attention at this time but suddenly she was sickened of speaking of Brent. She wanted to brush him aside put him out of her own life and Eva's too.

"Have you made up?" Eva asked, heartening a little over the possibility of happiness coming to her dearly beloved brother.

"Made up?" Helen echoed. "We've made up so tight that nothing can come between us again."

"I'm glad," Eva said simply.

Helen leaned over and kissed her, drawn by the wistful smile that hovered on her quivering lips.

"You must let yourself be happy too, dear," she said. "Think of your music now, and some day a real love will come to you. That sounds like empty comfort, I know but it's true, if only you can believe it."

"I must see Leonard again," Eva shocked her by declaring.

"Oh no!"

"I must,"

Helen sat stiffly upright. "Why?" she demanded, but Eva had no answer that she cared, or dared, to give.

"To tell him you're through with him?" Helen suggested hopefully.

Still Eva did not answer. Helen was seized with a thought that stirred her to sharp utterance.

"Surely you are not going to throw yourself at him?" she cried.

"Why, Eva dear, don't you realize that if he'd wanted you . . ."

"You . . . there was you," Eva said very low.

"Eva, please," Helen begged. "Don't you see, dear, that if it isn't me it will be someone else who can bring him what he wants?"

"He loves me, I know he loves me," Eva cried wildly. "He couldn't have lied so terribly to me."

Helen lost a great deal of her patience. "Now see here," she exclaimed, "you aren't going to have anything more to do with Leonard Brent. Bob will kill him. He has made a fool of you, Eva, but that was because you are sweet and good. He couldn't have done it to a harder-hearted girl. That's the bitterness of it. If you'd been just a cold, hard, unfeeling creature, you wouldn't have been so easily deceived."

"I'm not a cold, hard, unfeeling creature," Eva cried. "I'm just a girl who loves a man who loves me."

"You're not a girl who loves a man who loves me," Helen said. "You're a girl who loves a man who loves you."

"I'm not a girl who loves a man who loves you," Eva said. "I'm just a girl who loves a man who loves me."

"You're not a girl who loves a man who loves me," Helen said. "You're a girl who loves a man who loves you."

"I'm not a girl who loves a man who loves you," Eva said. "I'm just a girl who loves a man who loves me."

"You're not a girl who loves a man who loves me," Helen said. "You're a girl who loves a man who loves you."

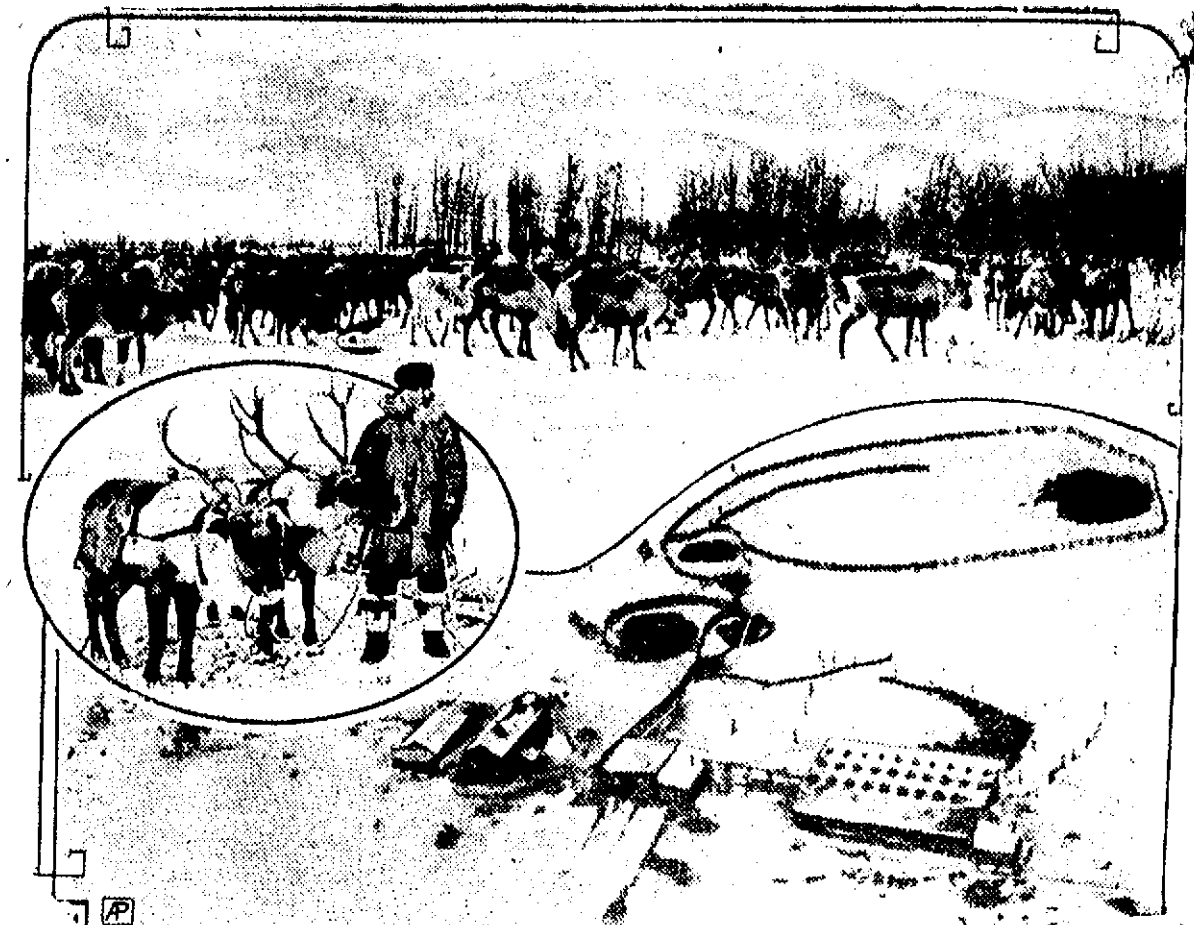

"I'm not a girl who loves a man who loves you," Eva said. "I'm just a girl who loves a man who loves me."

"You're not a girl who loves a man who loves me," Helen said. "You're a girl who loves a man who loves you."

"I'm not a girl who loves a man who loves you," Eva said. "I'm just a girl who loves a man who loves me."

"You're not a girl who loves a man who loves me," Helen said. "You're a girl who loves a man who loves you."

Canada To Move 3,009 Reindeer Over 1,500 Miles of Icy Waste

The Canadian government plans to transplant 3,000 reindeer from Alaska by a 1,500-mile trek. Above is shown a herd of Alaskan reindeer. A herder is shown in a reindeer team at lower left. At lower right is the corral near Nome where the deer for Canada are being rounded up.

NOME, Alaska, Oct. 19. —(AP)—The United States bureau of education will conduct the trek. Fifty sleds will carry provisions for the party. The reindeer will live off the land, digging under the snow for moss and other foods. Travel will be during the winter months only, the average daily coverage being 10 miles. In the summer the herd will graze.

The first reindeer were brought to Alaska from Siberia by Lapps in 1892 under the supervision of Dr. Sheldon Jackson of the bureau of education. In 10 years 1,280 head were imported in small herds. The bureau sought to aid the Eskimos by furnishing a food and clothing supply.

Today there are about 800,000 reindeer in Alaska, almost three-fourths of them being owned by the natives under the supervision of the bureau of education. The Lomen corporation is the largest private owner, with 200,000 head. Exports of reindeer meat and hides have been increasing rapidly the last few years.

Four Lapps, six Eskimo men and two Eskimo women and a doctor will follow the lead of the Arctic exploration, the greatest reindeer drive in history will start from here about November 15.

Kittigazuit peninsula, on the Arctic coast of western Alaska, will be the goal, with the herds being taken from the Buckland river territory north of Nome.

Except for the occasional aid of an airplane, 3,000 reindeer will be moved, without outside aid, 1,500 miles across the frozen waste-lands of northern Alaska and Yukon and McKenzie territories.

Much of the journey will be through virgin territory. It will be 20 months before the animals reach their destination.

The drive is the result of a decision of the Canadian government. Mrs. Harvey Wright spent Sunday night with her sister Mrs. Jewel Burns.

School started at this place Monday with Mr. Bryant as teacher.

At home she went straight to the telephone and called his apartment. His Japanese servant answered and she said, peremptorily, that she must speak to Mr. Brent.

He did not keep her waiting long.

"I want to see you about something very important," she said. "At once. Will you come up to Bramblewood?"

"As soon as possible," Brent assured her, and hung up.

"Well," he mused as he dressed. "I think we've come to the showdown."

"Aunt Fanny", 103, Tells How To Pass Century Mark

Work Hard and Live Simply, Her Formula; Drinks Coffee Every Meal

NORFOLK, Va.—Mentally alert and physically active, Mrs. Frances Hurst recently celebrated her 103rd birthday at her home at New Point, Mathews County.

To a multitude of descendants who gathered for the occasion, including five generations in one branch of the family she announced that she intends to live for some time to come and gave advice for surpassing the century mark.

Mrs. Hurst's formula for a long life is a simple one. She has worked hard, eaten anything she wanted to eat and refused to worry. She drinks coffee at each meal, frequently taking two cups of it. In fact, she has drunk coffee all her life and she cannot find that it has harmed her. She goes to bed with the birds and gets up with the sun and often walks three or four miles a day. She has never worn glasses and her eyesight now, she says, is as keen as it was before the Civil War.

Born when Abraham Lincoln was but seventeen years old, Mrs. Hurst has seen the United States grow from an infant republic into a world power. She has seen the pack-horse replaced by the stage coach, the stage coach supplanted by the railway, and now the ham of airplanes over her Virginia home is a familiar sound.

Mrs. Frances Hurst

Mrs. Hurst or "Aunt Fanny", as she is affectionately known, has not allowed the advancing years to dull her interest in what is going on in the world. She keeps up with events by reading the newspapers. Nor has she lost her sense of humor.

The other day a neighbor, who had attained the ripe old age of 89, called upon her.

"Aunt Fanny," he said, "we are getting old aren't we?"

"Lord, honey," she replied, "you're just a baby, and you talk about getting old."
